Rabys' Article on Expert Witnesses Was Very Much Appreciated

To the Editor:

I always enjoy (and find useful) articles by the Rabys. Their recent "Tax Practitioners as Expert Witnesses," Tax Notes, Apr. 29, 2002, p. 731, is no exception. I have no experience as an expert on the tax law in tax cases, the topic Burgess and Bill predominantly address. I do have some experience as an expert on tax law in non-tax cases (civil litigation between private parties where tax issues play a part). My impression is that this is a huge area for tax practitioners as expert witnesses. It is a topic Tax Notes readers would want to see addressed. If the Rabys have comments on that topic, I hope they'll provide them.

Very truly yours,
